Executive
Summary

„The Contributing to Modern Partnerships: Assessments of Sino-EU- Serbian Relations project (hereafter referred to as COMPASS) aims to identify, analyse, and provide recommendations regarding the risks associated with Serbia’s political, security and economic cooperation with the EU and China. The main objective and outcome of the project is to give recommendations on how to reduce or mitigate these identified risks.

The initial phase of this project, part of Work Package 1, involved conducting a literature review and gathering relevant data about the research topic. The second phase entailed assessing potential risks in multilateral cooperation, followed by the third phase, which included conducting a public opinion survey to gather wider attitudes and stances of the general public on the main directions and aspects of Serbia’s foreign policy relations.

The survey was conducted from July 5, 2024 to August 22, 2024. It had 1103 responses.

The survey was conducted online using a structured questionnaire format. The sample was randomly selected, yet the sociodemographic variables demonstrated a significant level of representativeness compared to the general population. The questionnaire was completed by citizens of the Republic of Serbia. It was administered in Serbian and ensured complete anonymity for all respondents. In addition to generally required info regarding respondents’ age, level of education, sex, place of living and overall assessment of their knowledge of the topic, the survey consisted of 19 questions, of which several had multiple aspects.

The respondents were informed about the purpose of the research, anonymity, and usage of gathered data.

The following represents the gathered results.
